JoLeta Nash's own story empowers her to empathize with the hurting and provide a path forward for both widows and Stand in the Gap for Widows church partners.

JoLeta supported her husband Robert through his battle with cancer. After his death, she felt called into a new ministry. God filled her heart with dreams for widows. In her professional role as Missionary Associate with the Assemblies of God US Missions, she served Widows Link by organizing special events for widows, cultivating a Facebook group community for widows, and meeting with widows in small groups to provide support.

Previously, JoLeta was a Senior Accounting Technician at her alma mater, Southwestern Christian University. Her tenure there speaks to her organizational and communication skills.

JoLeta has served her local church as Girls Ministries Coordinator, Sunday School teacher, choir member and special events team member. She has also been a GriefShare facilitator and served on the leadership team of the Keystone Homeschool Cooperative.

Her willingness and ability to share her experience equips her with a unique voice to pastors and widows alike. As Program Director of Stand in the Gap for Widows, JoLeta is passionate about equipping the local church to provide meaningful support and community for widows. She is dedicated to expanding and promoting the Stand in the Gap for Widows toolkit as a significant resource for churches.

JoLeta's personal experiences and lifelong commitment to ministry equips her for leadership of the Stand in the Gap for Widows program. She is "thrilled to be a part of the great plans God has ahead for widows' ministry across the United States."

JoLeta received a Bachelors Degree in Christian Ministry from Southwestern Christian University and a Bachelors Degree in Business Administration from Southwestern Oklahoma State University.
