Barrett

Before Life Launch, Barrett felt misunderstood and unknown by every man in his life, including his father. After Life Launch, he realized he had a team of men by his side. He felt listened to and understood by his mentors, and says he would not be where he is today without them.

Kyla

Fifteen year-old Kyla and her infant son were forced into foster care after an abusive family situation. When she heard about Stand in the Gap, she was afraid she would be judged by mentors. But she found a place to belong with her Life Launch team, and found healthy and encouraging relationships with her mentors.

Milo

Milo had dropped out of high school and learned that no one was to be trusted in life. Once he joined Life Launch, his mentors taught him how to trust again and encouraged him to stay in school. Milo went back to school, learned healthy patterns in relationships, and became president of his class.
